1. About This Guidebook

Purpose. This guidebook defines how Sable & Finch sounds, what language is off-limits, how content must be formatted for each channel, and which legal disclosures are required before publishing. It applies to every employee, agency, freelancer, and AI tool producing customer-facing content on Sable & Finch’s behalf.

Mission. Our mission is to give considered dressers the tools to build a wardrobe of lasting pieces instead of chasing seasonal trends.

Who this is for: Marketing, Content, Social, Customer Support, Legal & Compliance review, and any external agency or contractor producing Sable & Finch content.

Scope: Applies to all channels – social, email, SMS, push, web, paid media, and customer support – across every market Sable & Finch operates in.

How to use this document: Sections 2-3 define how we sound. Sections 4-6 define what’s off-limits and how content must be formatted. Section 7 is a channel-by-channel playbook. Sections 8-9 cover legal disclosures and crisis protocol. Appendices A and B are a machine-readable rule set and worked examples, useful for training reviewers (human or automated) on real compliant vs. non-compliant content.

2. Brand Foundations

Brand Story

Sable & Finch was founded by two pattern-makers who left fast-fashion houses within a year of each other, both for the same reason: watching perfectly good garments engineered to fall apart on schedule. The brand's entire visual and verbal identity is built around a single idea – make it once, make it right, say only what's true about it.

Positioning Statement

For discerning buyers building a wardrobe of lasting pieces, Sable & Finch is the label that lets craftsmanship speak for itself – unlike luxury marketing that substitutes hype adjectives for actual material and construction detail.

Competitive Differentiation

Where much of luxury fashion marketing relies on aspirational imagery and vague superlatives, Sable & Finch describes the actual denim weight, the actual stitch count, the actual sourcing – letting precision read as confidence.

Audience Personas

Adrienne, 44 – Creative director, wardrobe rebuild after years of fast fashion

- Goals: Buy fewer, better pieces and understand exactly what she's paying for.
- Frustrations: Luxury marketing copy that says nothing concrete about construction or materials.
- Primary channels: Email, editorial/press, in-store

Wes, 38 – Architect, minimalist wardrobe philosophy

- Goals: Pieces that photograph as well in year five as year one.
- Frustrations: Brands that quietly reduce quality while raising prices.
- Primary channels: Website, email, print lookbook

3. Messaging Pillars & Tagline Library

Messaging Pillars

Precision over hype. Specific material and construction facts replace vague superlatives. > “14oz cotton canvas, triple-stitched at every stress point.”

Restraint as confidence. We let quality imply value rather than announcing it. > “A coat built for the next decade, not the next season.”

Craft made visible. We show the process, not just the finished product. > “Each bag is hand-stitched by one of six artisans – their initials are stamped inside.”

Approved Tagline Variations

Context	Approved Line
Primary / brand	Sable – Do It Right.
Product care card	Made to be repaired, not replaced.
Press / editorial line	The label letting craftsmanship do the talking.
Private client outreach	Fewer pieces. Longer stories.

Taglines must be reproduced verbatim for the context listed. Do not mix and match phrases between variants, and do not create new tagline variants without Brand Owner sign-off.

4. Brand Voice & Tone

Sable & Finch’s voice is sophisticated, reassuring, precise, understated. These traits should be recognizable in every piece of content, regardless of channel or author.

Sophisticated

We write the way our garments are cut: precise, considered, nothing extraneous.

Do	Don’t
“Full-grain leather. Hand-stitched. Built to outlast the season.”	“OMG this bag is EVERYTHING!!”

Reassuring

Confidence without needing to shout – the product speaks first.

Do	Don’t
“Every piece is inspected by hand before it ships.”	“You won’t believe how amazing this quality is!!!”

Precise

Specific material and construction facts replace vague superlatives.

Do	Don’t
“12oz Japanese selvedge denim, sanforized for minimal shrinkage.”	“The best denim you’ll ever own.”

Understated

Restraint is the brand’s confidence signal – we let quality imply value, not adjectives.

Do	Don’t
“A coat for the next decade, not the next season.”	“This coat will change your life!”

Tone by Context

Context	Tone Adjustment
Marketing & social	Full voice expression – lead with personality within the pillars above.
Transactional (receipts, confirmations)	Warm but efficient; clarity outranks personality here.
Customer support (routine)	Calm, helpful, human – avoid scripted-sounding phrases.
Customer support (complaints or errors)	Extra empathy, zero humor, always a clear next step.
Legal, disclosures, and compliance copy	Neutral and precise; voice pillars do not override legal accuracy.

5. Restricted & Prohibited Language

The words and phrases below are banned in all Sable & Finch customer-facing content. If a word isn't listed here but feels like it violates the spirit of this list (hype, unsubstantiated claims, or off-tone language), escalate to Brand or Legal before publishing.

Restricted Term	Category	Why It's Restricted	Use Instead
guaranteed	Brand-tone violation	Absolute claims read as insecure, not confident, within a luxury register.	"crafted to last," "built for years of wear"
cheap	Brand-tone violation	Directly contradicts the brand's premium/craftsmanship positioning.	"considered pricing for the craftsmanship involved" revolutionary (overused)	Diluted superlative	Luxury copy earns its claims through specificity, not hype adjectives.	name the specific material/construction detail instead hack	Register mismatch	Casual internet slang breaks the sophisticated, understated tone.	"a simpler way to style it"
risk-free	Brand-tone violation / vague	Vague hedge language undercuts the confident, precise voice.	state the specific return/exchange policy instead luxurious (unqualified)	Brand-tone violation / vague	Vague adjective the reader can't verify; replace with the specific material fact.	name the specific material/construction detail exclusive (unless literally limited)	Substantiation / brand-tone risk	Only use when quantity or access is genuinely limited and documented.	state the actual production run size finest (unqualified)	Vague superlative	Unverifiable claim inconsistent with the brand's precision-over-hype pillar.	cite the specific material grade or origin timeless (overused)	Diluted superlative	Overused in luxury marketing to the point of meaning nothing.	describe the specific design choice that ages well
investment piece (unqualified)	Vague / unsubstantiated framing	Implies a financial claim without evidence.	describe expected longevity based on construction

General Principles (for anything not explicitly listed)

1. No unsubstantiated superlatives ("best," "#1," "revolutionary") without a citable source on file with Legal.
2. No absolute guarantees of outcome, result, or performance – individual results vary and must be described that way.
3. No manufactured urgency ("only hours left," "prices going up forever") unless the constraint is real and verifiable.
4. No borrowed authority (implying a certification, endorsement, or approval that hasn't been formally granted and documented).

6. Formatting Standards

Standard	Rule
Capitalization	Sentence case for headlines, buttons, and subject lines (capitalize only the first word and proper nouns). Do not use Title Case or ALL CAPS except for the brand wordmark itself.
Oxford comma	Always used in lists of three or more items: “colors, fonts, and tone” – not “colors, fonts and tone.”
Numbers	Spell out one through nine in body copy; use numerals for 10 and above, all statistics, and all measurements (e.g. “3 steps,” “nine reasons,” “24/7”).
Dates	Write dates as Month D, YYYY (e.g. “July 2, 2026”) in body copy; MM/DD/YYYY is permitted only in dense UI tables.
Emoji usage	Emoji are not used in any Sable & Finch content, including social. The brand voice communicates warmth and energy through word choice, not iconography.
Hashtags	Maximum 3 hashtags per social post, placed at the end of the caption, never inline in a sentence. The branded hashtag comes first.
Links & CTAs	Buttons and links use an active verb + outcome (“Start your plan,” not “Click here” or “Learn more”). Never use a bare URL in body copy on channels that support link text.
Accessibility	Every image in customer-facing content must ship with descriptive alt text (not “image of...”); every video must include captions before publishing.
Acronyms	Spell out any acronym on first use per document/page, followed by the acronym in parentheses; the acronym alone may be used thereafter.
Contractions	Contractions are allowed and encouraged (“we’re,” “you’ll”) to keep the voice conversational, except inside formal disclosures and legal text.

Visual Identity Quick Reference

Element	Specification
Primary color	#2D3142
Secondary color	#EF8354
Accent color	#BFC0C0
Primary typeface	Bebas Neue (headlines/display)
Secondary typeface	Muli (body/UI copy)
Approved tagline	“Sable – Do It Right.” – reproduce verbatim, do not paraphrase

Localization Notes

- Translated content must be reviewed by a native-speaking editor, not machine-translated and published directly.
- Idioms and wordplay in the Bebas Neue-styled headline system rarely translate – prioritize meaning over literal wording when localizing.
- Currency, date, and measurement formats follow local convention (e.g. DD/MM/YYYY and metric units outside the US) even when the surrounding copy is in English for a US-based CMS.

7. Channel Playbook

Character limits are hard constraints (Section 6 covers the full table); this section covers how to use each channel well within those constraints.

Instagram

Lead visually; caption supports the image rather than repeating it. Best for brand-world content, product detail, and community-facing tone.

Example (on-brand): > Real talk — meet the Sable & Finch way to get more done with less hassle. Sable — Do It Right. #Sable

TikTok

Fastest-moving channel – voice can flex slightly more casual here than elsewhere, but restricted words and disclosures still apply in full.

Example (on-brand): > VOICEOVER: ‘At Sable & Finch, we believe Growing Enterprises deserve better. That’s why we help you get more done with less hassle.’

LinkedIn

Most formal social channel. Use for company milestones, hiring, thought leadership – tone shifts toward “sophisticated” and “reassuring” pillars over “witty” or “edgy” ones.

Example (on-brand): > (see brand voice section for tone reference)

Email

Highest-trust, most personal channel. Subject line earns the open; body copy earns the click. Disclosures are never optional here.

Example (on-brand): > Quick one for you — how Sable & Finch helps you get more done with less hassle

SMS / Push

Shortest attention span, highest interruption cost. One idea per message, always.

Example (on-brand): > Let’s be honest! Your Sable & Finch update is ready — a quick way to get more done with less hassle.

Blog / SEO

Longest-form brand voice expression. This is where a voice pillar can be explained, not just demonstrated.

Example (on-brand): > Sable & Finch today reaffirmed its mission to give growing enterprises the tools to move faster without cutting corners, announcing a new initiative aimed at helping Growing Enterprises get more done with less hassle.

Paid Search / Display

Least room for personality – clarity and compliance outrank cleverness. Every claim needs to survive legal review at 30 characters.

Example (on-brand): > Sable & Finch: Sable — Do It Right.

Customer Support

Voice pillars still apply, but empathy and clarity always outrank wit or edge, especially in complaints or errors.

Example (on-brand): > Thanks for reaching out! We hear you, and we're on it — Sable & Finch's here to make sure you get more done with less hassle. We'll follow up within one business day.

Channel-Specific Character Limits

Channel	Field	Character Limit	Notes
X / Twitter	Post text	280 characters	Leave room for a link (~23 chars) if sharing one.
Instagram	Caption	2,200 characters (aim for first 125 visible)	Front-load the hook; caption truncates after ~3 lines.
Instagram	Bio	150 characters	One line of value prop + one line of CTA max.
Facebook	Post text	63,206 characters (aim for under 80 for engagement)	Short posts consistently outperform long ones in feed.
LinkedIn	Post text	3,000 characters (aim for under 200 above the fold)	First 2-3 lines show before 'See more' – put the point there.
TikTok	Caption	2,200 characters (aim for under 150)	Hook must land in the first 3 words.
Email	Subject line	60 characters (front-load first 30 for mobile)	Avoid ALL CAPS and more than one exclamation point.
Email	Preview text	90 characters	Must not repeat the subject line verbatim.
SMS / Text	Message body	160 characters (single segment)	Longer messages split into multiple segments and may be billed/delivered separately.
Push Notification	Title	50 characters	Titles longer than this truncate on most Android/iOS lock screens.
Push Notification	Body	150 characters	Lead with the benefit, not the feature.
SEO / Meta	Meta description	155-160 characters	Google truncates beyond this; include the primary keyword early.
Paid Search	Headline (Google Ads)	30 characters per headline	Up to 3 headlines are combined; each must stand alone.
Blog / Web	Page title / H1	60 characters	Keep the brand name out of the title unless it's the subject.

8. Required Disclosures & Disclaimers

Sable & Finch operates in a category with specific disclosure obligations. The table below defines exactly when a disclosure is required, the approved wording, and where it must appear. Do not paraphrase disclosure text without Legal sign-off.

Content Scenario	Required Disclosure Text	Placement Rule
Limited-edition or made-to-order product claims	“Availability is limited and not guaranteed until order confirmation.”	Directly beneath the product description.
Sustainability or material-sourcing claims	“Sourcing details reflect current supplier documentation on file; contact us for full material provenance.”	At the end of the product page copy.

General disclaimer (use when no scenario above applies but a claim is being made): > “Availability is limited and not guaranteed until order confirmation.”

Regional Disclosure Requirements

Region	Requirement
European Union	EU textile labeling regulation requires fiber composition disclosure on all product pages.
California (Prop 65)	Leather goods with certain tannins/dyes may require a Prop 65 warning; confirm with compliance before listing.

9. Crisis & Sensitive-Topic Communication Protocol

Acknowledge fast. Publicly acknowledge any service disruption, error, or complaint pattern within 1 hour, even if the full fix isn't ready. Silence reads worse than an honest "we're on it."

Drop the personality, keep the humanity. Suspend Sable & Finch's lighter tone pillars (wit, edge, playfulness) during an active incident. Empathy and clarity remain non-negotiable.

One voice, one channel of record. Designate a single channel (usually the status page or a pinned post) as the source of truth; all other channels link back to it rather than repeating varying details.

No speculation. Never guess at root cause, timeline, or blame publicly. State only what is confirmed.

Close the loop. Once resolved, publish a plain-language summary of what happened and what changed – silence after resolution erodes trust as much as silence during the incident.

Legal & Compliance sign-off. Any incident involving data, safety, or regulated claims requires Compliance sign-off before any public statement, even a holding statement.

10. Glossary: Approved Terminology

Quick reference mapping restricted terms to their approved replacements. See Section 5 for the full rationale behind each restriction.

investment piece (unqualified)	describe expected longevity based on construction

Appendix A: Machine-Readable Rule Reference

The rules below are the atomic, structured version of Sections 4-8, formatted for ingestion by content-review tooling (human or AI). Each rule maps to a Rule ID for traceability.

RL0350	Logo	The Sable & Finch logo may only appear on backgrounds that meet a minimum 4.5:1 contrast ratio against #2D3142.
RL0351	Color	#BFC0C0 is reserved for calls-to-action and small highlight moments — it must never be used as a large background field.
RL0352	Color	Never substitute unapproved colors for #2D3142, #EF8354, or #BFC0C0 in any customer-facing material.
RL0353	Typography	Never substitute a system font for Bebas Neue or Muli in customer-facing materials without design team sign-off.

RL0355	Voice & Tone	Sable & Finch never talks down to Growing Enterprises; explain, don't lecture.
RL0356	Voice & Tone	Every piece of Sable & Finch copy should sound like it could only come from Sable & Finch — avoid generic category language that any competitor could use verbatim.
RL0357	Messaging	Sable & Finch never disparages named competitors by name in public-facing content.
RL0358	Messaging	All Sable & Finch messaging must tie back to the mission: Our mission is to give growing enterprises the tools to move faster without cutting corners.

Appendix B: Worked Examples - Compliant vs. Violation

Real examples of content evaluated against this guidebook, with the reasoning a reviewer (or an AI content-compliance tool) should apply.

Example 1 - Ad Headline - Compliant

Sable & Finch: Sable — Do It Right.

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0356)

Example 2 - Email Subject Line - Compliant

Quick one for you — how Sable & Finch helps you get more done with less hassle

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0356)

Example 3 - Website Hero Copy - Compliant

Sable — Do It Right. Sable & Finch exists so Growing Enterprises can get more done with less hassle — nothing more complicated than that.

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0356)

Example 4 - Video Ad Script Line - Compliant

VOICEOVER: 'At Sable & Finch, we believe Growing Enterprises deserve better. That's why we help you get more done with less hassle.'

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0355)

Example 5 - Push Notification - Compliant

Let's be honest! Your Sable & Finch update is ready — a quick way to get more done with less hassle.

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0356)

Example 6 - Customer Support Reply - Compliant

Thanks for reaching out! We hear you, and we're on it — Sable & Finch's here to make sure you get more done with less hassle. We'll follow up within one business day.

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0356)

Example 7 - Press Release Snippet - Compliant

Sable & Finch today reaffirmed its mission to give growing enterprises the tools to move faster without cutting corners, announcing a new initiative aimed at helping Growing Enterprises get more done with less hassle.

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0355)

Example 8 - Social Media Post - Compliant

Real talk — meet the Sable & Finch way to get more done with less hassle. Sable — Do It Right. #Sable

Reasoning: Matches Sable & Finch's tone (technical-but-clear, reassuring, edgy, empathetic), reflects the mission, and uses approved messaging elements (tagline/benefit language) correctly. (Related rule: RL0355)

Example 9 - Customer Support Reply - Violation (Competitor_Bashing, High severity)

Unlike [Competitor X], Sable & Finch actually works — they'll rip you off, we won't.

Reasoning: Sable & Finch's messaging rules explicitly prohibit disparaging named competitors in public-facing content. (Related rule: RL0358)

Example 10 - Press Release Snippet - Violation (Logo_Misuse, High severity)

Print flyer proof: body copy overlaps into the logo's clear-space zone because the layout ran long.

Reasoning: Violates Sable & Finch's logo rules: Maintain clear space equal to 1.5x the cap-height of the wordmark on all sides. and a minimum size of 24px digital / 0.5in print. Stretching, adding effects, or recoloring the logo is explicitly prohibited. (Related rule: RL0349)

Example 11 - Push Notification - Violation (Imagery_Mismatch, Low severity)

Ad creative note: stock photo shows a generic handshake in a beige boardroom, which contradicts Sable & Finch's defined imagery style (high-contrast studio shots on a solid brand-color background).

Reasoning: Sable & Finch’s imagery guideline calls for ‘high-contrast studio shots on a solid brand-color background’. Generic boardroom stock photography contradicts this direction and should be rejected in creative review. (Related rule: RL0360)

Example 12 - Blog Intro - Violation (Font_Substitution, Low severity)

Email template note: headline set in Arial instead of Bebas Neue because ‘the designer was on PTO and needed a fast fallback’.

Reasoning: Violates the typography rule requiring Bebas Neue for headlines and Muli for body copy; system-font substitution requires design team sign-off, which wasn’t obtained. (Related rule: RL0353)

Example 13 - Video Ad Script Line - Violation (Unsubstantiated_Claim, High severity)

Sable & Finch products deliver results 3x faster than any alternative on the market.

Reasoning: Makes a comparative performance claim with no substantiation or disclaimer, creating legal exposure even outside a formally regulated category. (Related rule: RL0359)

Example 14 - Ad Headline - Violation (Banned_Word_Usage, High severity)

Sable & Finch: The revolutionary (overused) option, revolutionary (overused) results.

Reasoning: Uses the banned word/phrase ‘revolutionary (overused)’, which is explicitly prohibited in Sable & Finch content due to overpromising or legal-risk connotations in the generic category. (Related rule: RL0359)

Example 15 - Product Description - Violation (Color_Misuse, Medium severity)

Packaging proof: #2D3142 appears only as a thin 4px border instead of anchoring the majority of the design.

Reasoning: Breaks Sable & Finch’s color rules: #2D3142 must anchor at least 60% of any composition, and #BFC0C0 is reserved for small CTA moments, not large background fields. Introducing unapproved colors is also prohibited. (Related rule: RL0351)

Example 16 - Social Media Post - Violation (Off_Mission_Messaging, High severity)

Sable & Finch is expanding into flash-sale daily deals with rotating discounts on unrelated third-party products.

Reasoning: This contradicts Sable & Finch’s stated mission (‘Our mission is to give growing enterprises the tools to move faster without cutting corners.’) and its positioning as a Creator archetype brand. All messaging must tie back to the mission. (Related rule: RL0357)
